Duane et al, there is described a hand-held power tool. The tool includes a housing which is convertible from a housing for a hand tool to one for a power tool. In the '971 patent there are shown a ratchet handle which is integral with the housing for the hand tool and one or more toggle handles which are removable therefrom. In U.S. Pat. No. 4,567,594 issued January 28, 1986 to Haag et al there is disclosed a tool having a housing which is convertible from a hand tool to one for a power tool. The tool comprises a two-piece housing. The base housing contains the motor, the battery, and the necessary interconnecting electrical and pneumatic lines. The detachable upper housing contains a power head which is connected to the base housing by means of
