“Tarnished” (Ignis Mundus: Tarnish) is an action RPG written for mobile devices and consoles that plunges you into the lands between worlds, where the mythical lands and monsters in the game coexist. The lands between the real world and the mythological lands are forbidden areas, and players can freely work together in a closed network that allows communication only between player-controlled characters. In Tarnished, games are finished when the last life of a player-controlled character is left to choose from.

Comparative evaluation of quality of life following lumbar spinal fusion using pedicle screws and pedicle hooks. OBJECTIVERetrospective comparison of postoperative patient-reported outcome measures between spinal fusion patients who underwent fixation with pedicle screws versus pedicle hooks. The authors hypothesized that there would be no difference in postoperative health-related quality of life or satisfaction between the 2 fixation systems.METHODSAll adult patients who underwent lumbar spinal fusion via interbody or posterolateral fusion with or without fusion across multiple levels between 2009 and 2016 were retrospectively identified from the United States Medicare National Surgical Quality Improvement Program (NSQIP) Participant Use File. Outcomes compared included: length of stay (LOS), reoperation, surgical site infection (SSI), and quality of life (QOL). The effect of relevant covariates (sex, age, body mass index [BMI], American Society of Anesthesiologists [ASA] physical status score, education, surgical approach, surgeon type, insurance status, and urban/rural setting) were examined. Postoperative QOL was assessed via the Veterans RAND-12 Health Status Survey (VR-12) and patient satisfaction with the procedure was measured via the following question: "Would you again choose this surgery?"RESULTSIn the study population, 220 patients who underwent lumbar fusion with pedicle screws and 158 patients who underwent lumbar fusion with pedicle hooks were included. The pedicle screw group was comprised of more patients who underwent fusion at multiple levels, were male, had a lower BMI, and were less likely to undergo fusion as a trial-of-treatment than those who underwent fusion with pedicle hooks. Despite these differences, LOS, SSI, and QOL were similar between the 2 groups. More patients in the pedicle screw group were non-Hispanic white than non-Hispanic black (37.3% versus 19.8%; P = 0.01). The pedicle screw group had higher global health scores than the pedicle hook group (41.6 versus 37.8; P = 0.03). Patients who underwent fusion with pedicle screws had a higher probability of being "very satisfied" with the surgery than patients who underwent fusion with pedicle hooks (62.2% versus 47.5%; P = 0.02).CONCLUSIONSLumbar fusion patients who underwent fixation with pedicle screws or pedicle hooks had similar surgical outcomes, LOS, SSI, and QOL. Patients who underwent fusion with
