The function below is about generating an XPM file. library(openxlsx) options(stringsAsFactors=FALSE) write.xlsx(my_data, file="my_xlsx.xlsx", overwrite=TRUE) But the file is not created. Any help, please? Q: Using MongoDB MapReduce JavaScript Mutation API with Mongoose I have a Node.js, Express, Mongoose application that I've been working on for a few weeks and the beginning of it all was fine. I hit a road block which is that I can't figure out how to apply a MapReduce function and still use Mongoose and MongoDB's official MongoDB driver. Before, I had: // create a collection if (Mongoose) { var mongoose = Mongoose.connect(url, options); mongoose.model('Program', Program); } // create a collection mongoose.model('Program', Program); // initialize the map/reduce engine var map = function() {}; var reduce = function(key, value) {}; var query = { title: {$regex: '^Test$' } }; var options = { mapreduce: 'program' }; var program = Program.init('map','reduce', 'arguments', options); And now I have: // create a collection var mongoose = require('mongoose');

Hand-foot-and-mouth disease virus-induced poly (A) tail dynamics during apoptosis. The 3' end of the viral genome of foot-and-mouth disease virus (FMDV) is processed during apoptosis, that is, the virus encodes proteins that trigger FMDV release. FMDV is an enveloped single-stranded (+) RNA virus, and its genome is capped at the 3' end and polyadenylated. To determine if poly (A) tail length changes during infection and apoptosis and if the tail shortens during apoptosis, the kinetic alterations in poly (A) tail length in FMDV-infected cells was measured by RNA immunoprecipitation and real-time quantitative reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction. The results show that poly (A) tails become short in FMDV-infected cells during apoptosis and viral protein synthesis is required for this shortening.
