1. make sure your phone battery has enough charge to complete the flashing process. else, you might end up bricking the phone irreversibly. keep it charging for around 1 hour or more - that should give it enough juice to live through this. 2. the flashtool works great on windows 7. 3. 1. download the flashtool utility from one of the flashtool download links listed above (or here). flashtool is not hosted by them, but only the flashtool driver is. 2. download any of the xperia flashtool image, firmware files (for your specific version of the phone, 1.6.2 at the time of writing) from the sony flashtool download link ( here ). 3. open the file manager of your choice, such as winscp. 4. download the xperia arc s usb drivers here: here 5. unzip all the files in the above linked folders. if you download the driver directly from there, you will also need to download the driver details.txt file. unplug the arc s from the computer. 7. plug the arc s into the computer. 8. boot the phone. 9. connect the arc s to the computer using a usb cable. 10. the phone will be recognised and the drivers will be installed as soon as you boot into the phone. 11. if you have winscp installed, you can install the drivers using that. 12. restart the phone if it is required. download the zip-file of the xap drivers and double-click it to install them. (the zip-file contains the drivers and an updated version of the xap software (xap.exe)). you can also run the "xap.exe" software directly from the zip file. a small window will open up, after which you'll be able to navigate the contents of the zip file. you don't need the xap software to run the drivers.
