

From the link above you can download a local system image of Mountain Lion, it will be copied to your Mac's desktop. However, Mountain Lion requires Intel processors and therefore you need to have a Mac that can run Lion (such as a Mac Pro with Intel processors). So I don't have any idea what my specific problem is. I just upgraded from Snow Leopard to Lion and now on the newest Mountain Lion OS. I have a G4 750, and it worked just fine when running Snow Leopard. However, I get the 4 disc screen, and the second disc is mounted, saying that, "this computer needs to restart for the changes to take effect. Please shut it down and start it up again". The first disc is mounted fine, saying that it is bootable. It then boots into the disc screen, and then I get a system error, giving me a blank screen. Tried it on a Mac mini 1.1.2.6, and 3 series, with Snow Leopard and on Lion, all working fine, so it should work in Mountain Lion. All of them are motherboards with Intel processors, except for the first one. I get the 4 disc screen, and the second disc is mounted, saying that, "this computer needs to restart for the changes to take effect. Please shut it down and start it up again". The first disc is mounted fine, saying that it is bootable. It then boots into the disc screen, and then I get a system error, giving me a blank screen. It seems that, regardless of Apple or Hackintosh specific solutions, AOMEI have one that works for Mac users, AOMEI Bootable Disc Assistant. According to the instructions given in the above post, you download the AOMEI application, and get the demo version.

Hacked Mountain Lion Disc Image

Mac Pro 2013 models can run OS X 10.8 Mountain Lion with only minimum problems. If you have a Mac Pro 2013 model or a later model, upgrading to Mac OS X 10.8 (Mountain Lion) is as simple as clicking on the upgrade button in the App Store and completing the process. If you have a Mac Pro 2010 model (or earlier) then upgrading will require you to run the installer.sh script. OS X 10.8.2 Mountain Lion was released and I've heard that Mac Pro 2010 models (and some Mac Pro 2009 models) now officially work with the update. The official announcement from Apple announcement page has the release notes for Mountain Lion, OS X 10.8, and 10.8.2. For what it's worth, I was really excited when I was able to get my Mac Pro to run 10.8 Mountain Lion. In fact I had a feeling there'd be major driver issues with Mountain Lion and my Mac Pro, but I was pleasantly surprised at how well it worked. I havent tested Apple's claims that it can run Mountain Lion without problems on Mac Pro 2010 and some older models, but a 2012 Mac Pro (Mac Pro 5,1) definitely works great. Mountain Lion, which should be available to purchase in the Mac App Store shortly, will not work on older Mac Pro models, but there is a hack for that. All you need to do is run the Installer.sh script. Here is a tip for you all Apple users that have been in the same shoes as me. While your trying to work around the issue, wait for one of the ML updates to come out. Then go to the Apple website and while you are there check the ML updates for your Mac by going to Software Update in the Utilities folder. If you already have Mountain Lion installed on your computer, you will have to remove it before you can update to the new OS. Note also that Mountain Lion will not be free, as the base OS that you will need to OS X will be available for a $20-30 upgrade fee. 5ec8ef588b
