Conventionally, a service called "call answering" has been known as a service provided by a service provider. For example, when an in-call service of receiving a call, for example, a call from a person who is calling someone, is used by an extension phone for the caller, the following service is provided to the caller and the person for whom the call is intended. Firstly, when a call is received by the in-call service, an in-call answering agent is displayed on the television screen, and informs the caller of the in-call person's name and extension number. Then, when the caller presses a button displayed on the TV screen, the caller's call is connected to the extension number, so that the in-call person can hear the caller's voice. Moreover, when a call is received from the in-call person by the in-call service, and the in-call person, answering from home, asks the caller "Please call me back", the caller is connected to the in-call person's extension number. In the conventional example, the caller calls the number of the in-call person by using an in-call phone, but there is no means for receiving a call from the caller of the in-call person. In other words, when the caller wants to call the in-call person, a connection to the in-call person can be established only with the in-call person by using the 04aeff104c
