Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method and an apparatus for automatically detecting the roll end position of a continuously moving web. 2. Description of the Related Art An apparatus as described in published European Patent Application EP 0 668 109 A2 is disclosed, for example, for determining the roll end position of a continuously moving web. For this purpose, it is provided in the publication cited here for the web to be provided with colored bands, which are detected by optical means and trigger a punch or the like which cuts off the web at the roll end. The known prior art method has the disadvantage that the method is unproved and can, therefore, not be applied to all webs or web widths.Collagen content in Paget's disease of bone after calcitriol treatment: possible therapeutic effect.
